A firm whose work comes to life through engaging and being informed by context. Rather than simply reflecting or imitating the surroundings they seek an active connection with the place and the brief. By using difference and harmony of architecture and situation they create buildings that confront process and production.

Mitchell Taylor Workshops' engagement with process, from the original interpretation of the brief through to the practical production of architecture, is what drew us to them. As a result of their attitudes they have produced a varied and, at times, eclectic portfolio of work.

Unified by their thorough approach and their layered, considered design they are able to maintain an award winning standard with great diversity, and we hope we can learn a little of this from them.
